Because the publication schedule of THE RECORD is running several months late, some news items will appear out-of-date. However, this publication must also serve the future as a record of College events, and until it returns to a current publishing schedule, the policy of carrying in each issue news appropriate to the issue date must continue. During this period, however, we would caution that some material may appear out of context with issue dates.

Judge Paul Carrington's Plantation Law Office

The Judge of "Mulberry Hill"

By Virginia George Redd

"Another such victory would ruin the British Army," Fox tersely reported in the House of Commons regarding the outcome of the bloody battle of Guilford Court House.

Yet as winter waned, so did the hopes of the American patriots in the year 1781. Governor Jefferson hurriedly sent out calls to militia units of Southside Virginia, urging them to march to the support of General Greene, who was in forced retreat from Cornwallis. The years of the Revolution had taken a staggering toll of men and morale, and those troops that remained were in wretched condition.

The dismal outlook, however, did not quench their desire for independence, and the Southsiders rallied to Greene's assistance in such numbers that he recrossed the Dan River and re-engaged Cornwallis in battle at Guilford Court House. Although Greene was forced to concede victory to the redcoats, the stout stand of his men turned the tide of the war.

It is said that a messenger came at night to Mulberry Hill in Charlotte County with the news of Greene's retreat and the plea for help. The hours must have been bleak indeed for Paul Carrington as he contemplated imminent defeat and its aftermath.

Carrington had been born at Boston Hill, Cumberland County, on March 16, 1733, the son of George Carrington and Anne Mayo. His father had enjoyed wealth and prominence in Cumberland, serving as both clerk of the county and member of the House of Burgesses.

At the youthful—but then mature—age of 17, young Paul had left his father's home to move to that part of Lunenburg which would become Charlotte County. It was there he would spend the rest of his life. Although that section was sparsely settled, as it still is, young Carrington continued to live pleasantly. He studied law under Colonel Clement Read while residing in the Read home, Bushy Forest. In May of 1755 he was admitted to the bar.

It was also at Bushy Forest that he fell in love with, and, on October 1, 1755, married Margaret Read, daughter of Clement. They moved to the western part of the county in the Staunton River Valley and made their home at the place called Mulberry Hill.

Paul Carrington's public career was a successful one. His law practice was large and his obvious ability led to more responsible positions. He served as King's Attorney for Bedford, Lunenburg and Mecklenburg Counties, and after the formation of Charlotte in 1765, he represented it in the House of Burgesses until 1776.

But a comfortable life in a pleasant place was not enough. The American Colonists were seething at the injustice of their treatment by the motherland, and Paul Carrington of Charlotte wholeheartedly supported the movement for independence.

His role in Virginia's revolutionary government was a prominent one. He was a member of the Virginia Conventions of 1774, 1775, 1776 and 1788; the Committee that framed the Virginia Declaration of Rights and the Virginia Constitution of 1776; and the Virginia Committee of Safety in 1775-1776. He also served as chairman of the Charlotte County Committee of Safety.

Carrington's longest tenure in public service began in the Revolutionary years and continued into the next century, until he retired in 1807. Elected to the Virginia General Court in 1778, he became a member of the first Supreme Court of Appeals in 1789.

In 1775, on the eve of the Revolution, Paul Carrington and his contemporaries established Hampden-Sydney College in Prince Edward County. One historian has said that if the college had not been formed before the active Revolution, a school would never have been established here. While this may or may not be accurate, it is true that the revolutionary spirit did lend impetus to the plans. Men of various religious denominations, united in their desire for liberty, quickly consolidated their efforts to promote an independent college in the Southside.

Paul Carrington was one of the first Trustees appointed to see to the welfare of the institution in February, 1775, a post he held until his death in 1818. With his first wife's family, the Reads of Charlotte, the descendants of Judge Carrington share the unique distinction of having served on the Hampden-Sydney Board of Trustees continuously from 1775 to the present.

Colleges and conflicts cost money, and the patriots who founded Hampden-Sydney were hard pressed in the early days to provide the physical facilities necessary for the school's operation. In some of the earliest Board minutes extant, Nathaniel Venable and Paul Carrington "were given leave to build an house on the Academy land—for their sons or others as students (for the use of the Academy)."

The enthusiasm of the war reached the students and they soon formed a company, joining the local militia troops. Clement Carrington, son of Paul, was in this group. Both he and his brothers, Paul Jr. and George, served in the Army of the Revolution.

In 1807, after serving his country for 49 years, Judge Carrington decided to retire and returned to Mulberry Hill. It was to this house that he had brought his bride, Margaret, in 1755, and it was here that she died in the spring of 1766. Twenty-six years later, in 1792, he married Priscilla Sims of Halifax County, who died in 1803.

Carrington's public life brought him many positions of honor and trust. He filled all with integrity. One of the many tributes which he received said, "As a judge he was upright and impartial; and his opinions were respected. . . . [he was] a good citizen, a just man, and a sincere Christian."

A gentle man, knowing much of joy and sorrow, his long life ended on June 23, 1818, at Mulberry Hill.

The large frame house amidst ancient oaks has been owned and lived in continuously by the descendants of Judge Carrington. The center portion is that part which stood in the patriot's lifetime and is thought to incorporate an even earlier house. The wings were added in the mid-19th Century. The present owners and occupants of Mulberry Hill are Mr. and Mrs. Flournoy Barksdale. The latter is the former Miss Nellie McPhail, great, great-granddaughter of Paul Carrington and Margaret Read.

The scene is bucolic. Household pets ramble about the lawns and farm animals perform their jobs with dispatch, for Mulberry Hill is still a working plantation. The orderly row of dependencies is maintained, not only as a glimpse of yesterday, but to meet the need of today.

In the gardens, just beyond the large boxwood planted by the Judge, are the spacious flower beds. In this quiet place his descendants have placed a tablet in his memory.

The old patriot has been at rest for over a century and a half now, but the name of Paul Carrington continues to add luster to Virginia history. As for Mulberry Hill, the atmosphere is timeless with the awareness of a heritage that is timely.

TIGER FOOTBALL HISTORY:

A Tale of Joy and Woe

Collegiate football made its debut at Hampden-Sydney in 1892 with the enrollment of William Ford "Billy" Bull and, at best, its beginning was humble. Bull not only served as captain of the first four teams, 1892-95, but probably doubled as coach of the first three as well.

By 1894, young Bull was able to convince Maj. Richard Venable to outfit a new athletic field and provide financial assistance to cover the purchase of uniforms. The folllwing year, William J. King was named the College's first coach. Bull, later widely known as a missionary to Korea, is now heralded as the "father of Hampden-Sydney intercollegiate sports."

The College never played more than a one-game schedule until 1896 when it scheduled three. That year the Tigers ended the season at 2-1-0 under Coach George H. Denny, who would later become a very distinguished president of the University of Alabama. The following year the College moved to a 6-game schedule, ending the season at 2-4-0 under the tutelage of Eugene C. Caldwell. J. S. Kuykendall was captain of the squad of Coach A. S. Caldwell in 1898, as well as that of 1899, which was under the direction of Harry L. Shaner. Shaner called his '99 squad the "best aggregation of athletes Hampden-Sydney College ever sent out." It won four straight, missing an undefeated season only by a 6-5 loss to Washington & Lee.

The team of 1900, with a perfect 4-0-0 record, Shaner's last year as coach, still ranks as the only Hampden-Sydney team with more than a one-game schedule to go undefeated. Not only was it undefeated, but unscored on as well, while winning the championship of the newly formed Eastern Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Association (EVIAA).

Repeating as EVIAA champions on a 3-3 record, the 1901 squad blasted Richmond, 70-0, under new coach E. S. Martin. 1902 featured Hampden-Sydney's first team co-captains, W. G. McCorkle and Abney Payne, who led the team to a 3-2-0 record under Coach J. B. Parrish.

The following two seasons saw football at a low ebb. There is no record of who coached the Tigers of 1903, when only two games were played and, for some unknown reason, no team was fielded in 1904.

Football was born again in 1905 when today's oldest living captain, E. Grigg Elcan '08, led the Tigers to a valiant new beginning. This team went 0-1-1 under Coach Russell James. Whether the Tigers had trouble putting together a schedule for 1906 or someone forgot to record the results is not known, but a win over Randolph-Macon Academy for a 1-0-0 season is all that can be found. Probably the squad's biggest claim to fame is that its coach, O. Max Gardner, would later become one of North Carolina's most illustrious governors.

New football "suits", a $10 athletic fee, and a revitalized school spirit ushered in the 1907 season. Dr. Frank S. Johns, a current member of the College's board of trustees, captained the squad, which boasted a 3-4-0 mark with Coach James Nutter at the helm.

"The boys from Ham-Sid"—all 16 of them—stormed back to tie for the conference championship in 1908. It might be noted here that basketball joined football and baseball as an intercollegiate sport at Hampden-Sydney the same year. In 1909, the immortal Charles A. "Yank" Bernier captained the squad, which again tied for the conference championship on a 3-4-0 overall record that brought Coach Lewis Reiss' two-year mark to 8-8-0. During the period 1910-11, with less than 100 students enrolled at the College, Hampden-Sydney continued to play the perennial state powers, Virginia, VPI, VMI, and Washington & Lee. Despite the caliber of the schedule, the squads posted an amazing 7-8-0 two-year record. The 1910 team was coached by Kemper W. Yancey, later of the University of Virginia football staff, and the 1911 unit by B. R. Cecil.

The year 1912 saw young "Yank" Bernier return to "Death Valley" as Tiger coach, and thus began the building of the Bernier legend. Not only would he become the first man to coach a Tiger eleven for more than two seasons, but would serve in the post longer than any other has, before or since—21 seasons during two different periods. Soon the name Hampden-Sydney and "Yank" Bernier would become synonymous.

Bernier's first team went 1-6-0, with Loyal C. Benedict, now a resident of nearby Kingsville, as captain. 1913 proved slightly more successful at 2-5-0, including losses to VPI and Virginia. "Yank's" boys copped their first winning season the following year, 1914, at 3-2-0, en route to a tie for the EVIAA crown, the Tigers' first taste of the championship in five long years. Captain Charles Bugg '16, noted for his forty-yard dropkicks, was probably Hampden-Sydney's first "toe". The '15 team became the first to win six games in one season (against three losses) as they took the EVIAA title outright.

A repeat of the EVIAA title came in 1916, before "Yank's" departure for Dr. Dendy's Alabama, on a 4-3-3 record, the first 10-game schedule in Tiger history. Freshman H. G. "Hank" Crisp that year became the first Hampden-Sydney player of record to receive post-season honors when he was named "All Eastern".

Continuing their winning ways under new Coach M. C. Bowling, the Tigers tied for a share of the championship in 1917. This team played the only post-season game in the history of Hampden-Sydney. Having tied Richmond for the championship during the 5-2-1 regular season, a playoff game was called for. The early December affair ended in a 0-0 deadlock, deciding nothing.

Apparently there was no coach for the 1918 team. Torn by WW I enlistments and the national flu epidemic, only three games were played, the Tigers winning two and losing one. J. A. Jones was captain of the 1919 team coached by W. L. "Monk" Younger, later of VPI fame. It was a 4-3-1 year, highlighted by wins over Randolph-Macon and William & Mary.

The Bengals, captained by P. Cary Adams, ushered in the 1920's with another EVIAA title after suffering three early season defeats—one, the worst in Tiger annals, a 136-0 loss to VMI. New Coach E. C. Roundy revived his charges going midway the season, winding up the year with five straight wins.

The "wonder team" of 1921, led by Captain "Sid" Sands, raced to a 6-2-1 record, including a great 39-14 victory over Wake Forest College. But a disastrous year was in store for the '22 team, Coach Roundy's last, as it slipped to 1-8-0. Hugh Brenaman had the dubious honor of serving as captain of that team.

The second era of "Bernier the Coach" began with the 1923 team, which rebounded from the '22 season to compile a 3-6-0 season behind Captain W. B. Fuqua. Close games continued to dominate Tiger efforts the following year when they went 3-4-2 under Captain Cecil Blankenship.

Sydney's first player ever to register as a two-time All-Virginia pick, in 1925 and 1926. His '25 team made the longest trip in the annals of Tiger football—all the way to the University of Florida—and turned in a 3-5-1 season.

Ranked as the "best ever", the amazing 1926 team, led by the all-time great Alfred "Spritter" Adkins, tied Virginia, Florida, and Marshall, all 0-0, on the way to a 5-2-3 season. In what was billed by the Richmond newspapers as the first game played in the United States under the "newly adopted" rules, Hampden-Sydney scrimmaged Richmond in 1927. Harry "Horse" Myles was outstanding as both player and captain in a year that ended 4-5-0. No more eventful football year has ever been recorded than 1928's 3-6-0 season. The Tigers' venture into the then football-powerful East was featured by a meeting with a strong Cornell team. Although they lost, 18-6, the Bengals were praised by their opponents, fans and the press alike. Stuart Worden, who captained the team, was a unanimous selection for All-State honors.

The depression team of 1929 turned in a 4-5-0 season with a loss to William & Mary costing the conference crown. Other losses were to Cornell, Colgate, VPI, and VMI!

The first Tiger player to win All-America notice was the 1930 captain, Lloyd Arehart, who won honorable mention at end. This came after a dismal 2-6-1 season, which in itself attests Arehart's greatness. The following year saw an improvement of the record by one win.

1932 brought a 3-4-2 season, and the 1933 squad, whose season was highlighted by a 7-7 tie with Virginia, had to settle for the same record. 1934 saw one more game added to the win column for a 4-4-2 mark.

The 5-5-0 1935 season was topped by the naming of Captain Bill Formwalt and Powell White to honorable mention All-America teams. The schedule was unmerciful, the Bengals playing no less than five homecoming contests.

1936 saw the team slip to 3-5-1, with fortunes continuing to tumble (2-8-1) the following year. Not only was the 1937 schedule the longest in history, but one of the most rugged. Captain Al Buchinsky led the '38 squad to a 2-6-0 season, which again included too many of the powerful Eastern squads. The team was the last coached by the already legendary Bernier, although he remained as Hampden-Sydney's athletic director until returning to Alabama in 1942. With Coach "Red" Smith on the scene, 1939 saw no relief from difficult opponents. The schedule included the power of the East, Dartmouth. This team, led by Frank Sullivan, posted a 4-5-0 season. Smith matched his first season record in 1940, but the following year the Bengals could manage but two wins against six losses.

With WW II less than a year old, new Coach Frank Summers, already feeling the loss of personnel due to the war effort, was able to manage but a 1-6-1 season. 1943 saw the Navy V-12 program take over the campus, and football was curtailed. The 1944 squad undertook a 5-game schedule and the big win of the year was a 12-0 decision over highly favored Maryland. WW II continued to play havoc with schedules and player rosters, but the College managed to put together some sort of schedule at War's end, as evidenced by the "almost traditional" tie with Randolph-Macon in 1945.

"It is almost like starting over again", stated Summers the following year as the Tigers could manage but two wins while losing seven in a season which also saw the establishment of the Mason-Dixon conference.

Morgan Tiller, with his "T" formation, arrived as coach in 1947. This team was infamously known as the "scoreless wonders" because of six straight games in which they failed to put a single point on the board.

Hopes for a successful year were dashed during the early season when Lynn Chewning, a former player for the U. S. Naval Academy, was seriously injured.

Fortunes changed in 1948 as the Tigers, with a mended Chewning, matched the 1921 team record of 6-2-1. Co-captains of the team were "Bo" Wall and Chewning, the latter being named to all-everything, including the Associated Press Little All-America.

Walt Bridges and Doug Chapman led the '49 team to a second straight winning season at 5-4-0, the first back-to-back winning seasons since the '20's. The following year, Tiller's last, the Bengals went 4-5-0. Jim Hickey arrived on the scene as coach in 1951 and his initial team posted four wins, three losses, and two ties, the first of eight-straight winning seasons, five of them by Hickey-coached teams. Hampden-Sydney's first Virginia Little Six championship came in 1952 on a 5-3-1 Tiger record. The following season the team went 5-1-1 to cop both the Little Six and the Mason-Dixon titles in a season shortened by a train crash en route to a game with Sewanee in which several players and coaches were seriously injured. Co-captains Stokeley Fulton and Cabel Rives led the 1954 Bengals to a second straight Mason-Dixon championship. It was the "Year of Fulton" as the University of Tennessee transfer won every possible honor in Virginia football, and was named to the Associated Press Little All-America team.

The greatest record in Hampden-Sydney football history was compiled by the 1955 squad led by co-captains Jim Smith and Ron Henry, the latter being named to the Little All-America team at end. The Tigers compiled an 8-1-0 record, the only loss a 7-6 affair to Randolph-Macon, and a tie for the championship in what by now had become the Virginia Little Seven league. With the loss to Randolph-Macon went a 12-game win streak, dating to the previous year.

The 1956 Tigers, under new Coach Bob Thalman wound up at 7-2-0. A record 13-game win streak, started in 1956, led to both the Little Eight and Mason-Dixon titles in 1957, the 8-1-0 season matching the all-time record of '55. In 1958, the Tigers, led by Little All-American Bill Benson, wound up the season with a 6-3-0 slate, while five wins, three losses and a tie kept the 1959 edition on the winning side of the ledger.

The 1960's opened with the return of Stokeley Fulton as head coach. While his first team completed the season with but a 2-6-0 mark, his ten-year record, just completed, stands at 48-44-3. 1961 saw an improvement at 3-6-0, with current assistant coach Bobby Saylor turning in an outstanding season and copping post-season laurels.

In 1962, Lewis Everette, outstanding runningback, became Hampden-Sydney's fifth player to be named a Little All-American. Everette spearheaded a 6-4-0 season.

Still another successful season, 6-3-0, was in store for the '63 Tigers, which featured the outstanding play of flanker George Heilig. With Heilig again leading the way, the '64 squad won both the Mason-Dixon and Virginia Little Eight championships. Hundley Stadium, a brick structure on the side of the natural bowl that is "Death Valley", was dedicated the same year. The 1965 Tigers won six while dropping three, with the Bengals of the following year winning the Mason-Dixon title once again, on a 5-4-1 record. The 1967 squad finished at 6-4-0, despite the loss of Phil Rome, the most explosive runner in Death Valley history. In '68, a rebuilding year in which injuries plagued the Bengals, the squad could manage but a 3-5-2 season.

The latest version of the Tigers was hot and cold through a 10-game slate that ended 6-4-0, which was highlighted by the brilliant running of fullback Jim Whorley who established a new Tiger all-time career rushing record of 1,966 yards.

And there you have it—78 years of Tiger football in capsule form. Space has not allowed for the telling of many colorful stories—some true, some blown far out of proportion—that are intertwined in such a history. Hopefully more information about past Tiger football seasons, teams, individuals, and other facts and figures will come to light. A definitive compilation of them would make for interesting reading.

Douglas Clark Amick (1892-1969)

Few Southern churchmen knew more or cared more about the spiritual and human needs of Appalachia than Dr. Douglas C. Amick, B.A., '16, who died last November at his home in Newport, Tennessee. Reared within sight of spreading mountain ranges in Romney, West Virginia, he early came to know of the hardships of many in this vast area. He was turned towards Hampden-Sydney and the ministry through the influence of another remarkable alumnus, Frank Chilton Brown, '09, then the youthful and enthusiastic headmaster of Potomac Academy, later to be Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Douglas Amick, known to his college mates as "Pluto," had that rare force that quietly endures and overcomes great handicaps. Weighing only 130 pounds and far from robust in health, he made his football letter in his Senior year on the Championship team of 1915-16. He was described in the annual as "one of the surest tacklers that ever represented the College on the gridiron." He had to be taken out of the game time and time again because of injuries, only to come back in with dogged determination. In his sophomore year he was forced to drop out in the Spring and thereby, according to the harsh custom of the time, lost credit for the entire year's work. Yet he was what would now be called a B student, his marks often in the upper nineties, no easy feat in those days. He was twenty-four when he graduated.

Not long after, he enlisted in the U. S. Air Force, trained at Kelly Field, Texas, and serving in the 224th Aero Squadron, found himself on loan to the Royal Air Force in wartime England. He returned from overseas duty to enter Union Theological Seminary from which he received his B.D. degree. Later King College conferred upon him an honorary Doctor of Divinity.

The Reverend Dr. Amick

During his long and active ministry, Dr. Amick was for fifteen years Executive Secretary of Guerrant Presbytery, honored Moderator of the Synod of Appalachia and several times moderator of Guerrant and Holston presbyteries, as well as beloved pastor of the Newport Presbyterian Church. At the time of his death, he was Chaplain of World War I Veterans of Tennessee.

As the Kaleidoscope said of him fifty-four years ago, "coming back was his specialty." Douglas Amick, by his courage, "had won a place in the hearts of all his fellow students."

The Class of '73 and Other Futurities

The Class of '73, whatever their subversive potential, are at this writing unbearded, only fashionably long-haired, non-violent, conventionally clothed, and at a casual meeting pleasantly civil and self-assured. A sociologist might judge them to be "upper middle class" and from stable, college-educated, moderately conservative families. Only 3% of the parents are divorced or separated. Ninety-eight percent of the freshmen are church-affiliated, preponderantly Protestant. In point of intellectual capacity, they break no records but are a good, average Hampden-Sydney freshman class. They do represent an extraordinary diversity of talent.

The recruiting and selecting of a well-balanced freshman class is a precarious task as we enter upon the seventies. Indeed, so burning an issue is this that the editors of the Tiger have run a series of editorials proposing reforms. They favor wider distribution of the student body, well-picked student aid in recruiting and an increase in "relevant" course offerings to attract students. The faculty, for their part, aware of our formidable competition and desirous of living up to our academic reputation, would like to see the admission standards stiffened. Church leaders, on the other hand, are concerned about the ethics of catering more and more to the affluent as the overall cost to the student and his family steadily mounts. They insist that educational promise and the needs of the constituency should be the overriding considerations for an institution that represents the Christian community. Yet it is acknowledged that a given institution should be free to make its own unique contribution and stick to what it knows it can do well.

With what effect has our hard-working, ably-led Admissions Committee struck a balance between these conflicting demands? In addition to College Board scores, high school records and extracurricular honors available to the Committee, the Guidance Center has in compact form at least ninety scores or indices for each freshman, relating to his abilities, interests and personality characteristics. Since much of this is now done by machine scoring and each freshman answers 700 questions of a wide variety (120,000 computer item transactions for the class), an astonishing number of statistical inferences can be drawn. On the favorable side we note that the Class of '73 averages 80 percentile on a nationally used intelligence test of good predictive power and that they are evenly balanced as between "verbal" and "quantitative" ability. The College Board scores, indeed, taken a year earlier, show a much higher "math" than "verbal" score for our Freshman. But it is probable that the senior year in high school or prep school marks a great gain in vocabulary and verbal reasoning. In any case, one fourth of the Class of '73 scored in the top ten percent of the mental ability test scores for college freshmen. This class was also given the Expression Test (a Flanagan Aptitude test for grammatical usage and sentence structure) and their median is 90 percentile for male high school seniors or 20 percentile better than the Class of '58 when this same test was last given. The unfavorable side is that some of our first year students (perhaps 12%) are not well prepared for the rigors of a liberal arts college.

Hampden-Sydney is one of a very few institutions that undertake to measure vocational interests of the incoming students and follow them out. The newly revised Strong Vocational Interest test for Men, one of the most elaborately worked over instruments of the psychologist's art, now yields 22 "basic interest" scores and A's, B's and C's on 64 vocations from architect to YMCA staff member. The ranking of the twenty-two basic interests compositely yielded by the Class of '73 gives a fair indication of their cultural background and vocational trends. From highest to lowest (using median standard scores) they are:

1. Law/politics
2. Adventure
3. Social service
4. Recreational leadership
5. Writing
6. Public speaking
7. Religious activities
8. Teaching
9. Medical service
10. Art
11. Sales
12. Music
13. Business management
14. Military activities
15. Science
16. Agriculture
17. Mathematics
18. Merchandizing
19. Nature
20. Office practice
21. Mechanical work
22. Technical supervision

It is to be observed that half of these "basic interests" are broadly cultural or humane rather than specifically vocational. This reflects the breadth and resourcefulness of the home background, as well as the students' capacity for liberal studies. In keeping with the past, over 70% of this year's freshmen are definitely oriented towards the professions and 20% towards business; whereas 53% of the fathers are business men and 30% are professional men. We note, however, that law has taken over the top preference and medicine the second (in the ratio of 37 to 32 of those fully decided). Of these and thirty-five others who have put down medicine or law as one of two preferred vocations, many will be discouraged, but a larger than usual number are turning to teaching.

The recent cry that too many colleges are more concerned to cushion themselves with selected applicants than to challenge those who do come is not fairly chargeable here. The Admissions Committee is generous within proper limits. The percentage of failure with a strict, youngish, highly-trained faculty is low. Five times as many students here receive professionally trained vocational counseling as in the average college in proportion to enrollment.

Nevertheless, lack of total commitment to a worthy life task and to the intrinsic values of a liberal arts education is a problem for too many of our students as it is in most colleges. In essence it is a spiritual problem and goes back to the home and the church where values in depth are nurtured.

Alumnus Contributes $250,000; Infirmary, Apartments Slated

On February 15, President W. Taylor Reveley announced that Hampden-Sydney College had been named the recipient of a quarter-million dollar designated gift from I. Norris Blake, of Richmond.

Mr. Blake's gift will be used to construct a new infirmary and a multi-purpose apartment complex at Hampden-Sydney, and was given in honor of his wife, Mrs. Frances Kaempf Blake. In commenting on the gift, Mr. Blake said, "I am happy to be able to present this gift as a token of my affection for this great institution, in tangible tribute to my wife, a gallant lady of magnificient courage and Christian faith, in her continuing fight for recovery from serious illness."

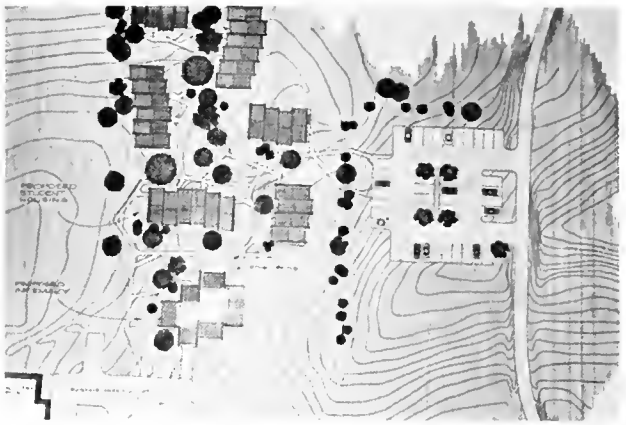
Mr. Blake, a 1933 alumnus of the College, is president of Mortgage Investment Corporation, one of the largest mortgage lending institutions in Virginia. He is a native of Richmond, and a graduate of John Marshall High School. After receiving a B.A. degree from Hampden-Sydney, he attended Harvard Business School and the T. C. Williams School of Law of the University of Richmond.

Mr. Blake joined his father's real estate firm in 1934, and together with his father and a brother, Alfred L. Blake, Jr., the latter a 1934 Hampden-Sydney graduate, formed Mortgage Investment in 1946.

Dr. Reveley, in praising Mr. Blake's generosity, said, "This is the greatest single boost to the College during my seven years as president. We are elated and tremendously encouraged by Mr. Blake's thoughtful tribute.

"The lasting benefits which will accrue to the College, to future generations of students, and to the community will serve as constant reminders of the affection of this alumnus for his college. This notable gift will enable our institution to take a great stride toward Hampden-Sydney's third century of service."

The $250,000 gift will bring about two "firsts" at Hampden-Sydney. The proposed infirmary will be the first building erected for that purpose, and the apartments, the first erected by the College. Until now, the facility has been located at various times in a section of a dormitory, the third floor of the administration building, and in other buildings. It is presently housed in "The Maples", a former faculty residence.



Architect's drawing showing proposed infirmary, immediately above parking area, and proposed apartments behind it. The rear of Winston Hall is shown at lower left.

The new structure will be an "out-patient" type of infirmary and will also provide grant-in-aid assistance in the form of housing for a maximum of four students seeking medical or health careers.

Apartments, as such, are nearly non-existent at Hampden-Sydney, and the multi-purpose townhouse-type apartments will help meet an acute need for flexible housing here.

Both structures will be located in the western section of the campus, adjacent to the student dining hall, Winston Hall, and a faculty-staff residential area. The general area is the western portion of what has been a golf driving range for the past several years. Construction of the infirmary and the initial units of the apartment complex, the first of some 36 apartments envisioned, is expected to begin in Spring, 1971, with completion scheduled by the opening of school for the 1971-72 session.

The infirmary will be constructed on the western edge of the golf driving range, near the old carriage house shown here.

Pritchard, '50, on Leave; Dickson Joins Staff

Donald E. Dickson, former development associate at the University of Cincinnati, joined the College as director of development on July 1. He replaced Claude H. Pritchard, Jr. '50, vice-president and head of the development division since 1966, who is on leave of absence until 1971 to continue work on the Ph.D. at Florida State.

Dickson, 41, is a 1950 graduate of Bowling Green State University and holds an M.A. degree from the University of Illinois. At Cincinnati he worked in a highly successful $33 million dollar campaign, serving as director of the faculty and staff phase of the drive, which set a national record of over $1½ million.

Dickson's wide experience includes sales work with the G. & C. Merriam Company and national administration of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, of which he was national alumni secretary, 1964-66, and national president, 1966-68. He is married and the father of two sons.

Pritchard has served the College since 1955, as assistant to the president, 1955-57, business manager and treasurer, 1957-66, and vice president and director of development since 1966. His work in development, for which he had no previous training, has won national recognition. He presented his award-winning Development for a Small College in New York at the national convention of the American College Public Relations Association in July. In implementing his Concept for Development for Hampden-Sydney College, he oversaw the revamping of all College publications, the creation of a public relations office, and an organized approach to the development of the College.

In announcing Dickson's appointment, President Reveley said, "Hampden-Sydney is fortunate to have secured a man with Mr. Dickson's experience and talents . . . we look forward to continued progress in the development program."

Dickson showed his enthusiastic approach as soon as he arrived on the Hill, "I am delighted to be working in a small college community. A school such as Hampden-Sydney offers great teaching, a selected student body, and a curriculum designed to prepare the student for any aspect of life. I am not one of the prophets of doom who feel that the small college will pass from the scene. People will always be willing to buy a share of quality education."

Venable Cupola Chimes Again

The bell of Union Seminary rang out from the cupola of Venable Hall until 1896, but from then until this September the cupola has simply been the highest structure on the Hill, visible from Willis Mountain, fifteen miles away. But, with five speakers installed, the cupola became at the opening of the College year the source of recorded carillon music for the College and the surrounding community.

The stereophonic carillon unit, consisting of console, speakers, and magnetic tapes, is the gift of four friends of the College: Mrs. James B. Platt and Mrs. A. H. Roberts, of Baltimore; Mrs. John C. Metcalf of Charlottesville; and Mrs. T. S. Swineford of Richmond. Mrs. Swineford's gift memorializes her husband, of the class of 1913.

The fully automatic unit is programmed to play tolling bells for class changes each day as a supplement to the hand-rung bell in Watkins Bell Tower, semi-classical musical selections at 5:00 p.m. daily, and hymns followed by a tolling bell before chapel services and Sunday services at College Church, which has never had a bell of its own. Schulmerich Carillons, of Sellersville, Pa., the manufacturer, supplies standard tapes recorded from highest quality English and Belgian bells, and is preparing a tape of College songs (The Hymn, Glass of the Finest, Tiger Born and Tiger Bred, and Here's to Old Hampden-Sydney, Drink 'Er Down) for use on special occasions. Over forty other musical selections are currently in the repertoire.

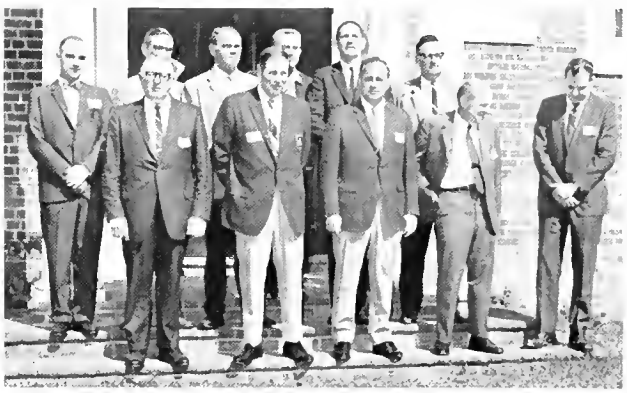
Collegiate Who's Who Taps Fourteen

Outstanding student leadership was recognized when fourteen Hampden-Sydney College seniors were selected for "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" in the Fall.

This publication annually honors students whose academic standing, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities, and future potential are above average.

Those at Hampden-Sydney honored by "Who's Who" were: William W. Muse and Randolph P. Tabb, Jr., both of Richmond; Larry H. Campbell, Clifton Forge; John C. Ellis, Jr., Portsmouth; Mark E. Feldmann, Roanoke; David S. Mercer, Alexandria; John D. Pond, II, Front Royal; Randolph L. Hallman, Xenia, Ohio; Arthur C. Houts, Memphis, Tenn.; Allen Kirkpatrick, IV, Washington, D. C.; Paul L. Reiber, III, Rocky Hill, N. J.; R. Ricky Reiss, Yardville, N. J.; Paul V. Robbins, Jr., Columbia, Md.; and Spenser C. Simrill, Charlotte, N. C.

B. Franklin Moomaw, Jr. '51, 1970 Alumni Association president



A little older, stouter, and balder, the Class of '44 celebrated its 25th reunion. Shown are the few members RECORD editors could round up for a photograph. They are, l-r: Front row—Michael Roksandic, Robert S. Mistele, Leslie L. Pugh, Jr., Charles A. Blanton, II, and Henry W. Brockenbrough. Back Row—Peter Morison, E. Randolph Trice, Robert C. Churchill, Jr., William B. Tinlin, John D. Pond, and Johnson McRee, Jr.

Of the hundreds returning for Homecoming, David N. Martin '52 and his future Tigers had a big day. Some, as portrayed at right, could have cared less about all the hoopla!

Homecoming — 1969

Sunshine and balmy weather gave their own special encouragement to annual Homecoming festivities, held on October 3 and 4. The 36-6 football win over Bridgewater on Saturday afternoon gave new enthusiasm to the several thousand returning alumni and friends as the alumni portion of the weekend officially closed with informal "decade reunions" on Cushing Lawn and some final tours of the new museum (see RECORD, Summer, 1969).

Friday evening saw dinner reunions of the classes of 1929 and 1944 in Winston Hall, now the dining hall and student activities building, but which those classes remember best as the library. Later in the evening the German Club concert, featuring the "Classics IV", was well-attended by students and alumni alike, as were the fraternity combo parties.

Saturday morning was "you-haven't-changed-a-bit" time at the registration and coffee hour in the Parents and Friends Lounge of Venable Hall, which preceded the annual meeting of the Alumni Association in Johns Auditorium.

J. Bruce James '53, president, presided at the gathering, which heard presentations by President Reveley '39, speaking on the College's new social rules, Board Chairman Squires '27, on the economic aspects of the private college, and Student Body President A. C. Houts '70, on the students' view of the College's past, present, and future.

New officers of the Association for the coming year were elected at the business meeting. B. Franklin Moomaw '51, Lynchburg paving contractor, was elected as president; Henry C. Spalding '60, Richmond stockbroker, vice president; and Henry A. Wiseman III '41, Danville physician, secretary.

Immediately following the meeting, alumni, their families and guests continued to swap yarns of yesteryear at a buffet held on the lawn of Winston Hall, where the College Commons featured its specialty, Steamship Roast Beef.

After that, it was on to "Death Valley" to witness the Tigers soundly avenge their 1968 loss to Bridgewater (see Death Valley Days section).

On Cushing lawn, the men had another chance to reminisce, while the wives traded the latest gossip and the children cavorted under the watchful eye of a circus clown and the Hampden-Sydney Tiger. All enjoyed a variety of homemade refreshments, and although this was the last official item on the alumni agenda, many stayed for the evening concert and fraternity parties.

Fourth Eubank Book Published

KEITH EUBANK, magna cum laude, class of 1942, has recently published his fourth book, Origins of World War II. After graduating from Hampden-Sydney, Dr. Eubank attended Harvard University and the University of Pennsylvania, where he took his doctorate in history in 1951. At present he is professor of history at Queens College of the City University of New York.

In this latest scholarly achievement, Professor Eubank has tackled a thorny problem: what caused the Second World War, and how could it have been prevented? Professor Eubank offers some thought-provoking answers, not all of which concern the chief culprit, Adolf Hitler. The historical record seems to indicate, he writes, that the Allies had deceived themselves into believing that war would not come. As a result, they were ill-prepared to repel the diplomatic and military thrusts of Hitler in the crucial years before war was declared.

Although much of the blame for the state of unpreparedness of the Allies has been placed on the "appeasers", Dr. Eubank points out that Western political leaders were simply carrying out the wishes of those who elected them to office.

Professor Eubank has challenged many orthodox interpretations of the Second World War; and readers will surely find his Origins of World War II to be instructive in understanding our current difficulties in the Cold War. For, as Dr. Eubank observes, the study of the origins of the Second World War "is vital for us who live under the threat of nuclear warfare, which has often been 'dismissed' in the same manner that people between 1918 and 1939 dismissed the possibility of war as unthinkable."

Book By Armstrong, '36, Lauded

Sounder, the latest book by author William H. Armstrong '36, has been labeled the "best novel of the year" for young readers by the New York Times. Said the Times' George A. Woods, children's book editor, "Sounder joins that select few (novels) because it is written from the heart, as any work of art should be, not calculatingly from the head." The book, with illustrations by James Barkley, was published by Harper and Row.

Mr. Armstrong's is a strong story about a black sharecropper's family and their 'coon dog, named Sounder.

The story is told objectively, but such is the quality of the telling that the reader's indignation is sure to be aroused. It is a harrowing story of man's inhumanity to man and dog—yet a certain ray of hope, revealed in the developing boy of the colored family, shines through.

The writing is straightforward and beautifully done, and is designated for those of "ages 12 up". However, its interest is not limited to teen-agers. Adult readers will find it anything but boring.

Mr. Armstrong, a native of Lexington, has taught history and study technique at Kent School in Connecticut for some 25 years.

He is the author of Study Is Hard Work (reviewed in the October, 1956, RECORD), Through Troubled Waters (reviewed in the April, 1957, RECORD), and co-author of The Peoples of the Ancient World (reviewed in the July, 1959, RECORD). Earlier this year he authored Tools of Thinking, a self-help workbook for students in grades five through nine.

Boney, '52, Publishes Second Book

Dr. F. Nash Boney '52, associate professor of history at the University of Georgia, recently authored his second book, A Union Soldier in the Land of the Vanquished. The book is a detailed study of the diary of a Union soldier during the post-Civil War period.

On June 15, 1861, Mathew Woodruff joined the 2nd Northeast Missouri Infantry Regiment. A native of Ohio, he had settled on a farm in northeast Missouri and, as one of the border people, his life has been only slightly affected by the growing division between North and South until Fort Sumter.

Knowing little of the South, his allegiance was to the Union and he wore its uniform until 1865. His army service was in the western theater of operations, beginning with the bloody battle of Shiloh and ending with the occupation of Pascagoula, Mississippi.

On his way to Mississippi in June, 1865, Woodruff began a diary which he kept until December of that year. It was a simple journal of everyday events, the headlines of the era having already been written.

In editing and annotating this journal, Dr. Boney has introduced one of the "little" people of the period; not a larger-than-life hero, but an uncomplicated person caught up in the holocaust of fratricidal strife.

Woodruff's diary is a welcome addition to the annals of the Civil War foot soldier.

Prior to going to Georgia, Dr. Boney served on the faculties of Murray State College and Washington State University.

'20

The Rev. Joseph S. Duckwall assumed the pastorate of the Mt. Carmel and Spring Hill Churches in the Appomattox area in September. Mr. Duckwall has previously served churches in Hopewell, Winchester, Rural Retreat and in King William and Amelia counties.

'21

The Rev. E. Summers McGavock retired from the Appomattox Presbytery in October after serving over 45 years in the ministry. On August 9, he was married to Mrs. Marjorie Dean Cornett Davis. The couple is making their home at Route 1, Box 313, Max Meadows, Va.

'28

Export Leaf Tobacco Co. of Richmond has announced the retirement of Hugh G. Edmunds, a vice president of the company, after more than 42 years with the firm.

'29

Previously unannounced in THE RECORD was the election of Robert W. Norris, manager of corporate relations for Philip Morris, Inc., as president of the National Tobacco Festival in December, 1968. A resident of New York, Mr. Norris has been associated with Philip Morris since 1935.

'32

The Honorable John A. Field, chief judge of the U. S. District Court, Southern District of West Virginia, was the subject of an editorial in the December 12 Charleston Daily Mail entitled, "On the Supreme Court, Judge John A. Field would serve Judicially". With reference to the vacancy existing on the U. S. Supreme Court, the editorial noted, "they could not readily find a man more deserving of the President's and the Senate's thoughtful consideration."

'34

The Rev. Howard C. Cobbs, administrator of Sunnyside Presbyterian Home, Harrisonburg, represented the College at the inauguration of Dr. William W. Kelly as the sixth president of Mary Baldwin College on October 4.

Alfred L. Blake Jr. was elected a regional vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at a meeting of the association at Houston in late January. He is president of the Richmond real estate firm of Alfred L. Blake & Sons, Inc., and is the brother of I. Norris Blake '33.

'35

Ted S. Tower, who joined First & Merchants Bank in Richmond as commercial development officer in 1968, has been promoted to assistant vice president by the firm. In January, he was named to the bank's Trust Honor Roll in recognition of his referral of $4.2 million in new business to the firm during 1969.

'37

J. Gilliam Conrad, formerly associated with Aerofin Corporation, was named deputy treasurer of the City of Lynchburg in July.

'38

Attorney Lorenzo L. Bean Jr. of Arlington, vice chairman of the Governor's Study Commission on Vocational Rehabilitation, was recently reappointed a member of the Board of Visitors of Radford College.

The Bank of Virginia has announced the election of Frank T. Hyde of Richmond as executive vice president in charge of the commercial credit division. A member of the firm since 1945, he has served as senior vice president since 1966. In his new position he will function as the firm's chief credit officer.

Thomas E. Adkins Jr. of Petersburg was one of four alumni named by the First & Merchants Bank to its Trust Honor Roll for 1969 for securing in excess of $1 million in new business for the firm during the preceding year.

'39

H. Frederick Robertson of Petersburg has joined First & Merchants Bank as agriculture officer in its Richmond operations. In addition to providing agricultural assistance and advice to various areas of the bank, he will function in a public relations capacity and will serve as the bank's representative before various State and Federal agricultural groups.

Evans '39 Clark '43

Robert M. Evans, airport manager for Pan American Airways in San Juan, Puerto Rico, for the past six years, has been appointed the airline's service manager at Los Angeles International Airport. An employee of Pan American since 1937, he has held similar posts at Miami, New York, and Brownsville, Tex., and in Latin America, Africa, and Europe. He is married and the father of four children.

'40

Ed Young of Richmond, who has been associated with the Richmond bureau of the Associated Press for many years, more recently as Virginia sports editor, has been promoted to Virginia news editor.

'42

Dr. Walter H. Cobbs Jr., former director of applied sciences for the Cincinnati Milling Machine Co., joined the National Lead Company of New York in October. He is filling the newly created position of director of new ventures. Prior to joining Cincinnati Milling, he had held positions with the Southern Research Institute, DuPont, Ampex Corp. and Geigy Chemical Corp.

'43

He had served as executive secretary of the West Virginia Industrial Bankers Association. He was a Presbyterian.

He is survived, among others, by his widow, Mrs. Charlotte A. Pauley, and two daughters, Misses Geraldine and Charlotte Ann Pauley of the home.

CARSON '33. Funeral services were conducted on January 24 for the Rev. R. Don Carson, 59, minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Sanford, N. C., who passed away three days earlier following several months of declining health.

A native of Campbell County, Va., Mr. Carson was graduated from Union Theological Seminary in 1936, and took the Th.M. degree there in 1942.

Mr. Carson had served churches in Hopewell and Ashland prior to assuming the pastorate of the Westminster Church in Raleigh, N. C., in 1945. In 1946 he became minister at the Sanford Church, a position he held until fall, 1969, when he was forced to retire for health reasons. At the time of his death, he was a member of the board of trustees of both Peace and St. Andrews Colleges.

Mr. Carson is survived by his wife, the former Hilda Mays of Richmond, a son, and two daughters.

ADAMS '35. Aubrey Thomas Adams, 55, retired mayor of Smithfield, died on September 18 in a Newport News hospital after a brief illness. A former member of the Smithfield Town Council, he resigned as mayor on September 1 after serving in that capacity for four years.

A native of Charlotte Court House, Mr. Adams held a Master's degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and was assistant supervisor of agricultural education in eastern Virginia. He had taught at Smithfield High School from 1950 until 1964.

A past president of the Smithfield Ruritan Club and a member of Trinity United Methodist Church, he was active in several civic and educational organizations.

In addition to his wife, the former Pattie Jeffreys, he is survived by a son, a daughter, and three brothers, one of whom is Courtney B. Adams '36 of Media, Pa.

McGUIRE '35. Dr. George Morris McGuire of Clinton, S. C., chairman of the department of education at Presbyterian College, passed away on October 3 after a brief illness.

Prior to joining the Presbyterian College faculty in 1966, Dr. McGuire had been associated with Greenbrier Military School in his native Lewisburg, W. Va., Montrose School for Girls in Essex Falls, N. J., and Ben Lippen School, David Millard Junior High School and Asheville-Biltmore College, all in Asheville, N. C.

Dr. McGuire held Master's degrees from the University of West Virginia and Montclair (N. J.) State College. He took the Ed.D. degree at Duke University.

Dr. McGuire was listed in the 1969 edition of Who's Who in the South and Southwest and the previous year was cited in Who's Who in American Education.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Shirley McGuire, a son, and three daughters.

JONES '50. Dr. Beverly Bryan Jones, a Coral Gables, Fla., physician, passed away in September at the age of 42.

At the time of his death, Dr. Jones had been in practice in Coral Gables for seven years. Previously he had practiced in Savannah, Ga.

At Coral Gables, Dr. Jones frequently moderated teenagers' sex education television panels. He was also a member of the volunteer faculty of the University of Miami School of Medicine.

A graduate of the University of Virginia School of Medicine, he was a diplomat of the American Board of Surgery and a member of the Southeastern Surgical Congress and the American, Florida, and Dade County Medical Associations. He was also a fellow of the American College of Surgery, and was active on the surgical staffs of four hospitals in the Coral Gables area.

Dr. Jones is survived by his wife, the former Rosemary Usher, and three sons.

BEATTIE '54. Harry C. Beattie III of Varina, 37, was killed in a single-car accident in that city on November 20.

A Henrico County police magistrate from 1960 to 1968, Mr. Beattie was assistant manager of the Tidewater Materials Corp in Richmond at the time of his death. Prior to joining Tidewater in July, 1969, he had been employed by Capital Concrete Corp. of Richmond for 10 years.

He is survived by his wife, the former Katherine Hamner, two daughters and one son.

FRAMPTON '63. Charles Richard Frampton Jr., 28, of Charleston, W. Va., died on November 8 in that city.

A lifetime resident of Charleston, Mr. Frampton was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and Lambda Chi Alpha.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frampton Sr., a brother and a sister.

Services were held on November 10 from the First Presbyterian Church in Charleston with burial following in Cunningham Memorial Park there.

BERNIER. Mrs. Grace Bernier, widow of the late Charles A. "Yank" Bernier, of Cottondale, Ala., passed away in Tuscaloosa on January 10 after being in declining health for several months.

Mrs. Bernier was a long-time resident of Hampden-Sydney, where her husband served as coach and athletic director 1912-17 and 1923-40. From 1940 until 1942 he was alumni secretary at the College prior to returning to the University of Alabama, which he had previously served as football coach and as alumni secretary.

Mrs. Bernier, as well as a surviving daughter, Mrs. Grace Bernier Smith of Suffern, N. Y., was last on campus in the fall of 1967, when a memorial to the late coach, "Yank's Corner", was dedicated.

With Mrs. Bernier at the time of death was her daughter and Hank Crisp '19 (deceased January 23, 1970) who had been an assistant football coach under Coach Bernier at both Alabama and V.P.I.

Funeral services were held in Tuscaloosa with burial following in Memorial Park Cemetery there.

Wiltshire Elected By Parents and Friends Assn.

Hundreds of proud parents and friends of the College met on the campus under cloudless skies on November 8 for the annual commemoration of Parents and Friends Day.

Biggest hit of the day for parents was visiting with their sons, many of them for the first time since their youngsters had become collegians. Many also used the occasion to inspect the recently completed student recreation lounge in Johns Auditorium, a project of the Parents and Friends Association, as well as other new facilities, including the computer center, language laboratory, and museum.

Prior to attending the annual outdoor buffet luncheon and the Tigers' 34-13 football victory over Centre, visitors attended the annual Association meeting in Johns Auditorium, presided over by C. Porter Vaughan, of Richmond, president of the group. Also speaking to the group were The Rev. H. William Vassey, College chaplain; Dr. W. Taylor Reveley, College president; and Arthur C. Houts, president of the student body.

Officers elected for the coming year, all of Richmond, were Richard W. Wiltshire, president; Robert C. Long, vice-president; Mrs. Thomas N. P. Johns, secretary.

ODK Taps Five Leaders

James C. Wheat, Jr., president of Wheat and Company, Inc., Richmond securities firm, was principal speaker at the College in November at the annual Fall tapping ceremony of Omicron Delta Kappa Society.

A graduate of Virginia Military Institute, where he taught civil engineering for a number of years, Mr. Wheat joined Wheat and Company in 1941, assuming its presidency in 1966. A member of the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange, Wheat also has served on the Richmond City Council.

Mr. Wheat is a member of several social and fraternal organizations and currently serves on the board of directors of several firms, including The Lane Company and Titmus Optical Company.

Mr. Wheat was accorded honorary membership in the society during the evening. Students recognized by Hampden-Sydney's Lambda Circle, all seniors, were: Arthur C. Houts, of Memphis, Tenn.; Vincent H. Ober, Jr., Norfolk; William W. Muse, Richmond; and Spencer C. Simrill, Charlotte, N. C.

Record Enrollment Recorded

A record enrollment of 645 students was on hand to open the 194th session of the College on September 17. The enrollment figure is made up of 438 upperclassmen and 207 freshmen, the latter having reported to the campus on September 14 for a three-day series of meetings sponsored by the student orientation committee, the goal of which is to introduce Hampden-Sydney to new students.

Upon arrival on the campus, freshmen and their families were guests at a reception in their honor in the Parents and Friends Lounge. This was followed by the traditional vesper service in College Church and dinner in the College Commons.

Two new facilities greeted incoming students, the relocated recreation lounge and a new language laboratory. The former was recently moved to newly renovated quarters in Johns Auditorium. The move will release space previously occupied in Winston Hall for other uses. The language laboratory, which affords 30 individual booths for the instruction of audio-lingual skills, is located in Bagby Hall.

Also greeting the students were nine new faculty members, who bring the current faculty strength to 55 persons. Newly appointed to the faculty are: Robert E. Deacle, instructor in computer science, a 1969 Hampden-Sydney graduate; Dr. Albert E. Elmore, assistant professor of English, a graduate of Millsaps College who holds advanced degrees from Vanderbilt University; Dr. John C. Hinchcliff, assistant professor of philosophy, a graduate of Canterbury University, New Zealand, who holds advanced degrees from Canterbury and Drew University; Robert N. Jolley, instructor in French, an alumnus of Southwestern at Memphis who holds a Master's Degree from the University of North Carolina, and who taught at Hampden-Sydney last semester on an interim basis.

Also, Dr. Lawrence H. Martin, Jr., assistant professor of English, a graduate of Tufts University who holds advanced degrees from the University of Massachusetts; Dr. James P. McClellan, associate professor of political science, an alumnus of the University of Alabama who did his doctoral study at the University of Virginia; and Robert S. McIlwaine, assistant professor of English, a graduate of Harvard University who holds a Master of Arts degree from Duke University.

Also, Henry S. C. Wu, instructor in Mathematics, an alumnus of San Diego State College who completed study toward the Master of Science degree at the same institution; and Dr. Arthur M. Young, visiting professor of classics, who took undergraduate and graduate degrees from Harvard University.

Language Lab Opens

Since 1776, Hampden-Sydney has included the study of languages in its curriculum—the ancient and the modern, both sorts being considered cardinal parts of a liberal education.

Students learned to read, write, and translate, but it took the better part of 200 years to add the fourth essential in really knowing a language. Last Fall Hampden-Sydney students, through the use of the new language laboratory, began to learn this fourth dimension—conversation in a foreign language.

The need for such a facility had been recognized for many years, but it was only through the concern of a friend of the College that it could at last be met. As a result of his generosity, a new dimension has been added to the study of languages at the College.

Through the use of individual tape recorders, as many as thirty students can simultaneously learn conversational skills. Each recording, spoken in the native tongue, parallels a current classroom lesson. After listening, the student recites the passage he has heard and compares his pronunciation to that of the original speaker. Languages heretofore really silent suddenly come alive and the command of them becomes orally and aurally functional.

Faculty Study Fund Enlarged

The "B. F. Moomaw Memorial Fund for Faculty Study", a memorial to the late B. F. Moomaw of Lynchburg, was recently enlarged by his widow, Mrs. Lou Mayo Brown Moomaw. A total amount of $26,700 has been placed in the College's general endowment fund, and income from it will be used to assist selected faculty members in summer study programs.

This special fund was originally established by Mr. and Mrs. Moomaw to encourage faculty study and research at the College. To date, one grant has been made. Last summer Dr. Herbert J. Sipe, Jr., assistant professor of chemistry, used the award to construct an electron spin resonance spectrometer, and synthesized compounds to be studied with the instrument.

The interest of Mrs. Moomaw and her late husband in Hampden-Sydney goes back many years. In 1964 they established the Ben and Mayo Moomaw Scholarship Fund, an award made annually to an entering freshman who has demonstrated noteworthy leadership.

Mrs. Moomaw's son, B. Franklin Moomaw, Jr., is a 1951 graduate of the College and is currently serving as president of the Alumni Association. A grandson, Dale M. Hodges, is a 1969 graduate.

Professor Holly

Professor Authors First Book

The story of the steamship Exodus 1947 is the saga of a lady whose life in the 20th Century was spent in both peace and war, the climax of her career coming as the result of the Nazi persecution.

In this well-researched and well-written account of the Exodus incident, Dr. David C. Holly, professor of political science at Hampden-Sydney, tells the story of a ship, built in 1927, and first used as a pleasure craft. Later she served in World War II in the invasion of Europe; then, after being consigned to the scrap heap, she was rescued and renamed in 1946. Her final mission was the most important and certainly the most fascinating of her career. She joined the fleet of ships that was to carry Jewish survivors of Nazi horrors to the Promised Land.

The adventure of this journey is the climax in the life of a gallant ship, one which originally plied the friendly waters of Holly's native Chesapeake Bay. The true story is a compelling one, and makes for most interesting reading.

Five-Day Week Now In Effect

At the beginning of the second semester, Hampden-Sydney students joined those at most Virginia colleges in attending classes on a five-day week schedule, changing a class schedule which had called for Saturday classes for as long as anyone can remember.

The new schedule, implemented at the request of both students and faculty, gives students an extra day of free time, but they still spend 150 minutes in each class weekly. Classes held on Tuesday and Thursday now meet for 75 minute periods, while those on Monday, Wednesday and Friday continue to meet for 50 minutes.

Due to the compactness of the new schedule, weekly assembly periods are now held during the evening hours. Chapel will continue to be held during the day, and students will still be required to attend chapel and/or assembly programs to meet assembly-chapel attendance requirements.

Dr. Moore, 90, Awarded Honorary Degree

On March 11, the honorary Doctor of Hunanities degree was conferred on Dr. Ray Atkinson Moore, Sr. at a special convocation in Johns Auditorium that was attended by hundreds of students, friends and alumni.

Dr. Moore, College physician emeritus and at age 90 one of Virginia's oldest practicing physicians, was chosen for the honor by the College's Board of Trustees.

That a humanities doctorate was awarded instead of an honorary science degree was conspicuous in itself. In commenting on it, College President W. Taylor Reveley noted that "it not only recognizes Dr. Moore's splendid contributions to his profession, but singles out a man who has been a living inspiration to his fellows."

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, of Millboro, former president of Longwood College, was the principal speaker. David D. Squires, chairman of the Board of Trustees, assisted by Dr. Reveley and Academic Dean Frank J. Simes, conferred the degree. Immediately following the ceremony, a public reception in Dr. Moore's honor was held in the Parents and Friends Lounge.

Dr. Moore is hooded by Dean Frank J. Simes while President Reveley, right, and Dr. Lancaster look on.

A native of Hampden-Sydney, Dr. Moore graduated from the College in 1900 and from the Medical College of Virginia in 1906. He served as College physician here from 1928 until 1961 when his son, Dr. Ray A. Moore, Jr., succeeded him. He served in the same capacity at Longwood College for 15 years. Since giving up his college practices, he has maintained a private practice in Farmville, in addition to serving as a Civil Aeronautics Board examiner, Prince Edward County Jail Physician, and as director of the immunization clinic of the Prince Edward Health Department.

Dr. Moore is a member of the Session of College Church, the Farmville Lions Club, Farmville Lodge No. 41 AF & AM, the Fourth District Medical Society and the American Academy of General Practice.

Dr. and Mrs. Moore, the former Miss Pauline Smith of Statesville, N. C., are the parents of four sons, three of whom hold medical degrees from the Medical College of Virginia. In addition to Dr. Moore, Jr., they are: Dr. John A., of Greensboro, N. C., and Dr. Robert P. of Richmond, all of whom attended the ceremony honoring their father, as did William A., a Dover, N. J., chemical engineer.

Citation for Ray Atkinson Moore

Dr. Moore, you are phenomenal! For sixty-four years you have brought the ministry of healing to this and other communities. From your early creative efforts in the establishment of the Virginia Department of Health to your current service to the occupants of the county jail, your generous giving of yourself has been known by all. An alumnus has captured beautifully your forty-two years as college physician and college physician emeritus: "Three generations of our family have been under his influence, and have been the better for it."

At a time when other men have retired from the pressure of public service you have ventured into new areas. From being the physician of the football team you moved to become the patron saint of Hampden-Sydney athletes. Your warm affection for each player, rich humor in every circumstance, and constant support of every game—win, lose or draw—have bestowed a wonderful memory for an exceedingly large number of Tigers.

An alumnus, you and Mrs. Moore, who by all rights should be standing here too, have sent four sons to Hampden-Sydney and on to graduate study in medicine and engineering. As churchman and citizen you have lived staunchly by your convictions.

Therefore, by the authority vested in me by the Board of Trustees of Hampden-Sydney College and by the Commonwealth of Virginia, I confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Humanities with all the rights, privileges and responsibilities thereunto appertaining. In token of which I give you this diploma and you will be hooded.

Professor John Brinkley '59 points aut early Hampden-Sydney history to Mrs. Elizabeth O. E. S. Leslie.

English Headmistress Speaks On Hampden

In 1643, the English patriot John Hampden died on Chalgrove Field, ending a life dedicated to liberty. In 1776, American patriots dedicated to liberty founded a small college in Southside Virginia, naming it in part for the great English patriot.

History book dates and names became very real at Hampden-Sydney on March 11 when a present occupant of John Hampden's ancestral home visited the campus. Mrs. Elizabeth O. E. S. Leslie, headmistress of Hampden House School, an independent boarding school for girls, was on a tour of America under the auspices of the English Speaking Union. In the several cities she visited, Mrs. Leslie gave talks on "The Life and Times of John Hampden" and showed slides of Hampden House, in which her school is located.

In the rolling countryside of Buckinghamshire, not unlike that of Southside Virginia, John Hampden lived on lands that had been in his family since before William the Conqueror. Much of his life was occupied primarily with the care of his family and lands. But it was his political career that changed the English squire into a symbol of liberty.

Hampden became a member of Parliament in 1621, but it was not until 1635 that he became a national figure. He was raised to national acclaim by his refusal to pay the 20 shillings for the ship money tax assessed him by Charles 1.

Payment of the tax would not have hurt Hampden financially, for he was a wealthy man, but Edmund Burke said later that "the payment of half twenty shillings, on the principle it was demanded, would have made him a slave." The King had Hampden arrested, his papers searched, and then released.

From then to the end of his life, John Hampden was one of the leaders of the anti-royalist party, standing firm against the King that increased his powers at the expense of his subjects.

The confrontation at Chalgrove Field could be called a skirmish at best, but a wound in the shoulder of Hampden brought a tragic loss to the Parliamentary cause. Most authorities agree that the course of English history might have been different had he lived.

Through Mrs. Leslie's words and pictures, her American audiences saw the English countryside where Hampden lived. The present Hampden House, with the exception of a small part, was built after John Hampden's death. But that small part contains the brick parlour where he was arrested and where a portrait of him hangs today. In the great hall there is the portrait of Queen Elizabeth I, given to Griffith Hampden (John's grandfather) after her visit there. It is thought that the avenue which leads to the house was cut at the time of this visit.

Great Hampden Church is nearby, filled with Hampden memories. There is a portrait of John Hampden in one window, and here also is the moving memorial to his first wife, Elizabeth.

Not far away are Great Kimble Church, where Hampden presided over a parish meeting at which the decision was made not to pay the tax, the grammar school he attended, and finally the monument to him on Chalgrove Field.

Mrs. Leslie was accompanied on her visit to the College by Mrs. Royal E. Cabell, Jr., wife of the president of the Richmond Chapter of the English Speaking Union. While at Hampden-Sydney, they were the overnight guests of President and Mrs. W. Taylor Reveley at Middlecourt, and attended a luncheon in Mrs. Leslie's honor.

During a luncheon given in her honar, Mrs. Leslie presented President W. Taylor Reveley with a photograph of a portrait af John Hampden.

SAE Establishes Hill Colony

In February, Hampden-Sydney was named as the site of the first colony in the history of Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity, through affiliation with Phi Alpha, a local fraternity formed at the College last year.

In making the announcement, Dr. Paul B. Jacob, Jr., national president of SAE, said, "We are extremely pleased to have our first colony located on a campus where we were represented over a hundred years ago."

His reference was to SAE's Virginia Upsilon chapter, established at the College in 1860 as the second national fraternity on campus. Due to the Civil War, the chapter was dissolved the next year and never reactivated.

Phi Alpha was established under the guidance of its current president, Robert M. Lamond, an Alexandria junior, and has sought SAE affiliation since that time. It has involved itself in a number of local civic causes since its founding.

As a colony, the local group will undergo a period of training, at the end of which it will apply to SAE for permanent chapter recognition. Upon such approval by the fraternity's Supreme Council, the original chapter designation, Virginia Upsilon, will be restored. Nine other national social fraternities are currently represented on the campus.

NSF Again Underwrites Research

For the ninth consecutive year, the National Science Foundation has named Hampden-Sydney College as the recipient of a grant to underwrite student research in science this summer.

The $6,180 award will pay stipends to four natural science majors, bringing to over 50 the number who have studied in the program since 1962. All previous grant recipients have later pursued study at graduate or professional schools.

In March, a large crowd attended PiKA Founders Day ceremonies at the College. Among them were, l-r, College President Taylor Reveley and Trustees Billy Spong '41 and Kyle Baldwin '39.

Wilson Foundation Cites Two

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation, of Princeton, N. J., announced in February the selection of Robert W. Hutten as one of 1,153 "Woodrow Wilson Designates" in the United States and Canada. A classmate, Charles R. Wilson, won honorable mention status in the competition.

Hutten, an English major from Virginia Beach, is a graduate of Princess Anne High School, where he was class valedictorian and president of the student body. At Hampden-Sydney he has been the recipient of a National Science Foundation grant for two years, and is a member of Chi Beta Phi, Eta Sigma Phi and Sigma Upsilon honorary fraternities, currently serving as vice president of the last. In 1969, he was the recipient of a summer study grant to study William Faulkner, the late novelist.

He was among finalists from 12,000 nominees from over 800 colleges and universities in the Woodrow Wilson competition.

Wilson is a graduate of Waynesboro High School, where he was a member of the golf and football teams and the Key Club, and served as a class officer. At Hampden-Sydney he is a member of the Glee Club, and Theta Chi social fraternity, which he currently serves as treasurer, and is a chemistry laboratory assistant.

For the past several years, Hampden-Sydney has ranked near the top of Virginia colleges and universities in the number of its seniors, in proportion to the size of its graduating classes, who have been selected by the Foundation. During a 10-year period ending in 1969, the College had nine Designates, ranking it fourth among 29 participating Virginia institutions.

College Lists Administrative Changes

Three changes in the administrative staff were announced in December, to be effective July 1, 1970.

Lewis H. Drew, director of admissions at the College since 1964, will become dean of students. He replaces Dr. Donald R. Ortner, who will retire from the position to devote full time to the psychology department, of which he has been chairman for the past four years, and to new duties as College psychologist.

John H. Waters, director of financial aid, will replace Drew as director of admissions, while retaining his former position. His new title will be Director of Admissions and Financial Aid.

Mr. Drew

Mr. Waters

Dr. Ortner

Mr. Drew is a 1960 graduate of Hampden-Sydney and received the degree of Master of Arts in Teaching from Johns Hopkins University the following year. He was head of the English department and a member of the athletic staff of St. Paul's School, Brookland, Md., for one year prior to his return to Hampden-Sydney. He has just completed a year's leave of absence from the College in additional study toward a doctor's degree in education at the University of Virginia.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Eta Sigma Phi and Omicron Delta Kappa honor societies, Kappa Sigma social fraternity, and Phi Delta Kappa, professional education leadership fraternity. A deacon of College Church, Drew is also a member of the Virginia Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, having served as president of the association for two years. He is a native of Richmond and is married to the former Miss Nellie Louise Peyronnet of that city. They have two children.

Waters became registrar at Hampden-Sydney in 1965 after five years on the teaching and athletic staffs of George Wythe High School, Richmond. He has also served on the faculty of Bainbridge High School, of the same city, and is a veteran of U. S. Army service.

A native of Richmond and a 1958 graduate of Hampden-Sydney, Waters has done graduate work at both the College of William and Mary and Longwood College. He was named to his present position in 1968, and served as acting director of admissions during Drew's leave of absence.

A member of the Farmville Rotary Club, Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity, the Virginia Assn. of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers, and College Church, Waters is married to the former Miss Sara Louise Cosens. They have one son.

Dr. Ortner is a native of Bay City, Mich. and came to Hampden-Sydney in 1961 as associate director of the Presbyterian Guidance Center and a part-time member of the faculty. He was named dean of students in 1963.

Gulf Aids Science Center Construction

A $5,000 grant from the Gulf Oil Corporation was received by Hampden-Sydney College in January.

Presented to Frank J. Simes, administrative vice president and academic dean of the College, by Julian E. Lanier of Richmond, Gulf Oil district manager, the gift will be used toward the construction cost of the Science Center.

The Gulf Foundation makes capital grants to privately financed and controlled institutions which obtain a major portion of their financial support from non-tax sources. This grant was made under Gulf's Educational Assistance Program, which last year distributed more than $3 million to students and institutions of higher learning.

Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor of Virginia J. Sargent Reynolds, center, brought his campaign to the campus in early October. Here he is shown with President Reveley, left, and Professor John Brinkley after addressing a large audience.

Grid Tigers Go 6-4-0

Lloyd Goode

Jim Whorley

In early September Head Football Coach Stokeley Fulton said, "We are going to be a better football team." Despite a tougher schedule and crippling injuries at the quarterback position, Fulton's prophecy proved accurate. The Tigers had a good year, winning six and losing four.

The Bengals opened the season by losing to Shepherd College, 12-19, at Shepherdstown, W. Va. With Dean East and Marion Setliff out of the game, the Tigers' inexperienced secondary proved vulnerable to a 75-yard pass bomb in the fourth quarter which won the game for Shepherd. Linebacker Lloyd Goode was outstanding in the Tiger defense.

Revenge was sweet for Hampden-Sydney the following Saturday as they crushed Sewanee on the latter's home field by a 28-6 score. Rick Beale riddled the Sewanee secondary with 13 pass completions, and Jim Whorley rushed for 159 yards. Total offense for the Bengals was an amazing 502 yards. Dean East led the defense with three great pass interceptions.

After two games on the road the Tigers were happy to play their first '69 game in Death Valley. A large homecoming crowd roared approval as their Bengals defeated Bridgewater, 36-0. Sophomore Bobby Long ran five Bridgewater punts back for 138 yards as the Tigers enjoyed excellent field position throughout the game. Lady Luck failed the Tigers in the following game. Leading the visiting Generals from Washington and Lee by 13-0 at halftime, Coach Fulton's quarterback crew was depleted when Beale and Bobby Long were injured. Fumbles and interceptions plagued Hampden-Sydney all day and despite the fact that the Bengals outgained the Generals by 102 yards, they could not stop the great passing of Chuck Kuhn of Washington and Lee, and lost the game 21-13.

The underdog Tigers visited Western Maryland for the fifth game of the year and bounced back from the Washington and Lee disappointment with an astounding 16-15 victory. Reserve quarterback Donnie Stanley scored both Tiger touchdowns as he directed the Bengal ball-control offense. Jim Whorley ran for 152 yards in 27 carries and the Bengals won the game in the final two minutes when John Payne tackled a Terror back in the end zone for a two-point safety. Coach Fulton's team won its fourth game of the year the following week when the Tigers shut out Johns Hopkins, 32-0, in Hundley Stadium. Coach Lou Wacker's defensive unit was outstanding as Hopkins was held to 23 yards on the ground and only four completions in nineteen pass attempts.

The Cats played at Emory and Henry on November 1 and, after leading the Wasps, 7-0, at halftime, succumbed to a Wasp rally in the second half, 15-35.

Tiger fortunes changed the next Saturday when the Bengals returned to friendly Death Valley and defeated Centre by a 34-13 score. A large Parents and Friends Day crowd saw their Tigers score 21 points in the first four minutes of play to sew up the contest. Beale, returning to action after missing three games with an ankle injury, sparked the Tiger offense with two touchdown passes.

"Centennial Football Day" saw the Bengals turn back Mars Hill in a terrific defensive struggle by a score of 9-6. Performing before many ex-football captains and former Hampden-Sydney coaches, the Tigers came from behind in the fourth quarter to win. Danny Hardy sparked the Bengal defense and won the game's "Most Valuable Player" award.

The season's finale was played in Ashland with the Mason-Dixon Championship at stake. The Tigers made a great second-half comeback to put Randolph-Macon on the ropes, but the Yellow Jackets managed to hang on, and edged the Bengals, 22-19. The Tigers scored first on a field goal by Paul Page. The Jackets then retaliated with three T.D.'s. Touchdowns by Beale and Long, with two point conversions by Long and Steve Bryant, brought the score to 19-22, but time ran out before the gallant Tigers could score again. The great Jim Whorley closed his collegiate career by rushing for 139 yards.

The 1969 Tigers won many individual honors. Jim Whorley was voted the "most valuable player", Barry Parsley was named the "most improved", Lloyd Goode was selected as the "best defensive player", and Clay Matthews was named the recipient of the Sportsmanship Award. Beale and Bobby Woltz were selected as Co-Captains for the 1970 season.

Virginia Small College All State honorees were: East, Goode, Long, Whorley, Vince Hardy, and Danny Hardy. Honorable mention went to Jim White and Mike Leidy.

All Mason-Dixon selections were: East, Goode, Hardy, Pond, and Whorley. White, John Payne, and Heber Himmelwright won honorable mention berths.

Tri-Captain Goode and Vince Hardy won honorable mention on the N.C.A.A. College Division All-American team.

Loyal C. Benedict '14, the oldest captain on hand for Centennial Football Day, cut birthday cake, which released hundreds of ballons into the air.

Football Birthday Honors Former Greats

The largest group of football heroes ever seen at one time in Death Valley gathered on November 15, 1969, as guests of honor at Centennial Football Day, the College's celebration of the 100th birthday of collegiate football.

From the tri-captains of the '69 Tigers—Jim Whorley, Jim White, and Lloyd Goode—down through the years to Loyal C. Benedict '14, oldest captain on hand, they returned to be honored and to reminisce about bygone days.

Highlighting the half-time reunion, which featured the introduction of the 54 former captains and coaches who returned, was the presentation of Hampden-Sydney's five little All-Americans: Lynn Chewning, Ron Henry, Bill Benson, Lewis Everette and Tiger Coach Stokeley Fulton. Bill Sale, 1961 tri-captain, captured travel honors by coming all the way from California, one of 12 states represented. All captains, including those who could not be present, received a special commemorative certificate, including Grigg Elcan '08, of Bainbridge, Ga., the oldest living captain.

Completing the half-time ceremonies, Athletic Director Dick Burrell presented the official NCAA proclamation and medallion of the National Football Centennial to College President W. Taylor Reveley. Mr. Benedict then cut into a huge imitation birthday cake, filling the sky with hundreds of colorful balloons.

The "Tigers" then went on to defeat a stubborn Mars Hill squad, 9-6, to set the stage for a reunion banquet that evening in Winston Hall. Paul Severin, two-time All-American at University of North Carolina and former head coach at Randolph-Macon College, was the guest speaker. In his remarks he stated, "there is no higher tribute to the importance of football at Hampden-Sydney than this turnout. Never let it die."

Memories soon turned to legend as the stars of yesteryear recalled the glories of Death Valley "in their day." Tales by Hugh "Billy" Powell '32, Alfred "Dickie" Dudley '27, Henry "Hun" Flannagan '40, along with former Coach Frank Summers' stories of the World War II days were particularly memorable.

Many wives accompanied their football heroes of yore and after a banquet of their own, were entertained by Mrs. Richard Burrell for dessert while their husbands reminisced.

A short history of Hampden-Sydney football (condensed from the original text which appeared in the Centennial Football Day program) will be found elsewhere in this issue of THE RECORD.

"Green" Cagers End At 11-16

Coach Bill Pegram warned everyone: "color the Tigers green". With no seniors on the squad and depending heavily on five freshmen, the Bengal inexperience was a plague throughout the season.

The Tigers opened strong against Lynchburg, drubbing the Hornets 106-76 and followed with a rousing 96-78 win over the undefeated Fort Eustis Wheels, with Hal Absher, Dave Trumbower and Kenny Catlett leading the charge. Fortunes turned as the Tigers hit the road and lost to Roanoke, 80-107 and Washington and Lee, 56-86.

Back at home the Tigers beat Emory and Henry 107-83 when Bobby Powell limited Pat Burns, the state's leading scorer, to 10 points, and Absher and Trumbower controlled the boards while scoring 31 and 33 points, respectively. After a 59-86 loss to Virginia Commonwealth, the Tigers played well in the Quantico Christmas Tournament. The Bengals captured third place in the Tourney, beating Southampton, 81-56, and Ohio Dominican, 91-75, before losing, 63-69, to New York Tech.

With Absher out with pneumonia and Dave Trumbower hobbled by a severe ankle sprain, the Tigers suffered through successive losses to Gardner Webb, West Virginia Tech, Roanoke, Old Dominion, Randolph-Macon and Virginia State. The bright spot during this slump was the improved play of freshmen Geoff Burness and Mike Minter. After a fine 89-50 win over Gallaudet, the Bengals dropped a toughie, 72-76, to Washington and Lee, before being upended, 91-76, by Mount Saint Mary's.

Hampden-Sydney sandwiched two thrilling overtime wins against Western Maryland, 69-65, and Lynchburg, 86-81, around a loss to Randolph-Macon. The courtmen then split their next four games, defeating Wilmington College, 103-44, and Bridgewater, 93-84, while losing to Old Dominion and Virginia Commonwealth University. With Hal Absher and Dave Trumbower returning to near form, the emergence of Burness and Minter as starters, and the spark provided by freshman guard Mike Mihalov, the Tigers were a solid team again as the season neared its end.

The Mason-Dixon championships held the final opportunity for the Tigers to get rolling. However, their hopes were dashed with a disappointing 83-92 overtime loss to Loyola of Baltimore. Mike Mihalov had 22 points and played brilliant defense in the Tigers' finale, while Geoff Burness scored 18 points before fouling out.

For the season, Trumbower and Absher led the scoring with 371 and 296 points, respectively. Burness Minter, and Catlett also averaged in double figures for the year. Big Dave averaged 13.2 rebounds per game and freshman Burness, 10.4 per game. Mike Minter ranked in the top twenty in the nation in foul shooting, hitting 84.8 percent of his charity tosses.

Hal Absher

Trumbower won the Ray A. Moore Award as the most valuable player. Pete McEachern was the recipient of the Sportsmanship Award, and Tom Hoy was voted the Lotz Award as the most improved player. Absher and Trumbower were elected co-captains for the 1970-1971 season. Prospects will be brighter in '70-'71 as the Tigers should return intact, there being no seniors on a team which was very disappointed in its 11-16 season.

Grapplers Cop Fifth Winning Season

Coach Lou Wacker's 1969-70 matmen enjoyed their fifth consecutive winning season, winning 7 and losing 6 against the usual tough opposition. Big winners for the Bengals were: Captain Vince Ober, 158-pounder, with a 9-2 record; Bob Wells, in the 150-pound class, with 10 wins against only 2 losses; and John Payne, 7-1-1, in the 177-pound class. Other letter winners for the Bengals were: Stuart Deal, 118-pound class; Gordon Wilhoit, 126-pounder; Bob Small, 134-pound division; Hugh Fitzpatrick, a 142-pounder; Rick Merrill, 190-pound class, and Rocky Bounds, 167-pound division.

The Tigers scored wins over Lynchburg, 39-5, Catholic, 26-14, Newport News Apprentice School, 21-20, Washington and Lee, 33-11, Baltimore, 28-10, Loyola, 35-13, and Gallaudet, 39-5, while losing to Virginia Commonwealth, American University, Eastern Mennonite, Western Maryland, Towson, and Washington College.

Payne placed second in the 177-pound class in the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament and will captain the 1970-71 team. Captain Vince Ober was third in the 158-pound division, and was named recipient of the Ray A. Moore Award as the "most valuable" wrestler. Fitzpatrick won the Sportsmanship Award.
